CEO and Chair of the Board named within 24 Housings 50 most influential people in housing

Stockport Homes Group is delighted to announce that Helen McHale, CEO and Jenny Osbourne, Chair of the Board have been recognised within the 2020 Housing 24 'Powers Players' list – the definitive list of who is influencing housing in the UK today.

Helen McHale, Chief Executive of Stockport Homes Group has again this year been named in 21st place within the publicly nominated list of the fifty most influential people in UK housing.

Being part of Power Players, sponsored by NHBC, is not just about having power, but using that power to influence the sector and wider society for the better. Helen was praised by the magazine for her inspirational leadership, her voice within housing and ultimately her optimism and enthusiasm.

Chair of the Board at Stockport Homes, Jenny Osbourne is also named as a Power Player again this year in 13th place. Jenny is Chief Executive at TPAS (Tenant Participation Advisory Service) and ensures that tenants have a strong voice within housing, and continues to innovate the way in which engagement is done.

Stockport Homes Group have celebrated a year of great achievements; including being named 'Landlord of the Year' in the Northern Housing Awards, and being a 3 star company in the Sunday Times Top 100, in its eleventh year in the list. The ALMO remain driven by a passion to deliver services that go far beyond being a traditional landlord with an inspirational mission of 'One team, transforming lives'.

Cllr Sheila Bailey, Cabinet Member for Sustainable Stockport says; "Congratulations to Helen McHale and Board Chair, Jenny Osbourne, for being recognised as exceptional drivers towards the excellence in public sector housing we all want to see. A job being very well done".

"Assistant Chief Executive, Sandra Coleing says, "We are extremely proud of the commitment to the sector shown by Helen and Jenny, and to have two such inspirational influences within the group has really developed our culture, and our belief that that entrepreneurialism and a commercial focus are key to tackling the economic challenges the sector faces, whilst delivering excellent services to our customers."
